Glück auf!
(traditional miners' greeting)

*From mining parade to Bach cantata –
Old town flair with world heritage title and living tradition*

“Glück auf” – this is how the people of Freiberg still greet each other – in the city where miners dug for silver and ores for over 800 years. The wealth and splendour that Freiberg’s silver mining brought to the whole of Saxony can still be witnessed today in the lovingly restored, listed old town with Freudenstein Castle, late medieval townhouses and richly decorated gateways. Since 2019, the city has proudly borne the UNESCO World Heritage title as part of the Erzgebirge/Krušnohoří Mining Region.

The mining tradition and its associated customs have deep roots and can be experienced here: Be it at one of the traditional mining and smelting parades, where hundreds of uniformed miners parade through the cosy alleys or at an entrance to the Freiberg silver mine.

Silver also plays a major role in music – at least when it comes to the world-famous Gottfried Silbermann organs. With their unique sound, they attract not only music lovers but also organists from all over the world to Freiberg’s St. Mary’s Cathedral, and the St. Peter’s and St. Jacob’s Church (Petri- und Jakobikirche).

We are looking forward to your visit!

FREIBERG SILVER MINE

Discover centuries-old mining tradition and experience one of the oldest and largest silver mines in Saxony at first hand

800 years of tradition, 1,000 ore veins and active research mining are unique in Germany. Follow the traces of silver. Where once the miners dug for ore, scientists from the TU Bergakademie Freiberg also research and teach. Visitors can follow their tracks and findings at authentic locations. The Freiberg silver mine is the cradle of the Erzgebirge/Krušnohoří Mining Region and today an integral part of the UNESCO World Heritage Site. Valuable silver from the mining area's soil once created the basis for Saxony's wealth and made Freiberg Germany's Silver City and the mining academy the leading monastic university. Our tours open up gems of Freiberg mining, such as the "Alte Elisabeth", an otherwise very rarely accessible historical site of the Silver City of Freiberg. The shaft, which dates back to the middle of the 19th century, is still largely as it was when the last miners left it in 1913. Experience exciting insights into the history of mining and the working life of the miners who laid the foundation for the prosperity and technical progress of an entire region.

FREIBERG CATHEDRAL

With electoral burial place and Gothic cloister

One of the most beautiful hall churches in Saxony characterises the city of Freiberg's skyline. The cathedral's external simplicity is in complete contrast to the rich interior decoration. The sacral art from different eras attracts tens of thousands of art and organ lovers to the cathedral each year. The restored Gothic cloister, with its impressive collection of tombstones belonging to the "von Schönberg" family, is now also part of the visitor's tour. The oldest surviving organ by Gottfried Silbermann can be heard in church services, concerts and special tours. In addition, one can marvel at the electoral burial chamber with the Moritz Monument (1563) and the music-making angels (1592/94) with the original Renaissance instruments. The Tulip Pulpit (1505) and Miners' Pulpit (1638) testify to the deep faith and high artistry of their time. With the Golden Gate (1225) and the Triumphal Crucifix Group (1225), the cathedral contains two significant sacral works of art from the Romanesque period. Come visit and discover the magnificent ensemble of the cathedral with an electoral tomb, Gothic cloister and green cemetery.

SILVER SOUND & CRAFTSMANSHIP

Exhibition on organ builder Gottfried Silbermann

For more than 100 years, Freiberg was the heart of Saxon organ building and of a unique organ landscape that has been preserved in large parts to this day. From 1711, the famous baroque organ builder Gottfried Silbermann had his home and workshop at Schloßplatz. This is where, 300 years ago, he created 45 of his world-famous organs. Today, the Silbermann House holds a modern exhibition that allows visitors to experience the allure of the organ and the unique craftsmanship of organ building. It is deliberately aimed both at well-informed organ enthusiasts and at people coming into contact with the subject for the first time. The lovingly furnished historical exhibition workshop and the playable organ model according to Silbermann's design make the organ an experience for all generations.

FREIBERG IN ITS CHRISTMAS SPLENDOUR

Erzgebirge Christmas and mining tradition – a special experience

Silver City Freiberg transforms into a magical Christmas-winter wonderland with a festive, illuminated old town and a large ice rink in Freiberg's Freudenstein Castle just in time for Advent. The Freiberg Christmas Market alone attracts visitors from near and far under the motto "Original Ore Mountain Mining Style" on the historic Obermarkt, where nearly 100 themed stalls offer Christmas treats, Ore Mountain folk art, handicrafts and much more. The customs of the miners come alive when the Historic Freiberg Miner's Association marches majestically through the old town by torchlight – always on the Saturday before the 2nd Sunday in Advent. Advent is also celebrated in St. Mary's Cathedral. The famous Christmas Oratorio by Johann Sebastian Bach draws visitors to Freiberg Cathedral with its fantastic acoustics.

A pre-Christmas shopping spree in Freiberg's town centre or the Christmas exhibition and concerts in the city and mining museum make for an eventful visit.

The building, affectionately known as the "little Semperoper", offers a year-round programme of plays, music theatre and philharmonic orchestra that is as entertaining as it is artistically demanding.

In the historic auditorium with its almost 300 seats, visitors can experience operas, operettas and musicals, classics and comedies up close – an unforgettable live experience.

The Nikolai Church, directly opposite the theatre, regularly hosts philharmonic concerts. And in summer, open-air performances are not only held at the Kriebstein lake stage, but in the castle courtyard and many other places in the district.

THEATER FREIBERG

Theatre in the classroom

Designing and developing a play themselves, getting to know orchestra instruments, the Middle Saxon Theater offers this and much more to school classes. Special performances for children and teenagers can be found in the repertoire of the world's oldest municipal theatre.

TERRA MINERALIA

With the school class to terra mineralia

With 3,500 minerals, gemstones and meteorites, terra mineralia in Freiberg's Freudenstein Castle is one of the largest and most beautiful mineral exhibitions in the world. About 1,000 beautiful minerals from famous German deposits are also on display in the "Mineralogical Collection Germany" in the neighbouring Krügerhaus.

In addition to the fascinating minerals, the hands-on laboratory "Research Journey" awakens curiosity for natural sciences in schoolchildren and preschoolers. Various school programmes are held by students of the TU Bergakademie Freiberg. All offers are age-appropriate and aligned with the Saxon curriculum in the subjects of geography, chemistry, mathematics and science. They build on the methods of playful, discovery and inquiry learning. Students actively learn about minerals through interesting experiments. Duration, costs, curriculum references as well as the detailed description for each school programme at the extracurricular learning site terra mineralia can be found on our homepage: www.terra-mineralia.de.
